Acknowledgments

This book is the result of a number of projects that dealt with Arab and Muslim youth in Australian schools, Muslim asylum seekers in contemporary Australia, multicultural education, the settlement patterns of Arab Australian communities and intercultural adaptation among migrant youth. These projects were supported by a number of grants from Deakin University, the Telstra Foundation, the Scanlon Foundation (formerly the Brencorp Foundation), the William Buckland Foundation and a major grant from the Australian Research Council. We are grateful to this ongoing support that enabled these projects to be conducted and provide the basis for the various parts of this book. A number of external partnerships have also facilitated the completion of this research most notably that with the Victorian Arabic Social Services to whom we are grateful for building strong partnerships with a number of schools in the northern and western regions of Melbourne. We would also like to acknowledge the input and support of other colleagues who contributed to this wide ranging research agenda in particular Michael Leach, Louise Jenkins, Lucas Walsh, Annelies Kamp, Loretta Duffy, Anna Trembath and Michelle Miller. We are also grateful to the professional support provided by MUP and in particular the series commissioning editor A/Professor Shahram Akbarzadeh. Finally, we would like to express our deepest gratitude to the hundreds of students, parents, teachers and other school leaders who played an essential part in the successful completion of these projects. We hope this book will assist modestly in providing a better understanding of their educational and social experiences.
