EDUCATION, SCIENCE AND PUBLIC POLICY

IDEAS FOR AN EDUCATION REVOLUTION

Edited by Simon Marginson and Richard James

WHEN WILL THE 'EDUCATION REVOLUTION' REALLY BEGIN? IS THE NATION READY FOR THE CHALLENGES OF THE GLOBAL KNOWLEDGE ECONOMY AND THE EMERGING CENTRES OF INNOVATION AROUND THE WORLD? WHAT ARE THE KEY PROBLEMS AND WHERE ARE THE POLICY SOLUTIONS?

These are the questions addressed in Education, Science and Public Policy, in which nine policy practitioners and educators shape the knowledge economy into bite-sized chunks for public policy debate. Contributors include Terry Moran, Maxine McKew, Collette Tayler, Barry McGaw, Shih Choon Fong, Simon Marginson, Michael Gallagher, Margaret Gardner and Ian Chubb.

Simon Marginson is Professor of Higher Education, and Richard James is Professor of Higher Education and Director of the Centre for the Study of Higher Education at the University of Melbourne. The Centre organised the public policy seminars that generated this book.
